Welcome to Offrejoie First Edition Impact Report. This report is a collection of our achievements following the blast that hit Beirut on August 4, 2020. It describes the many ways we make an enduring impact that matters to our beneficiaries, donors, partners, volunteers and our society at large.

Working to restore people's dignity

Our achievements represent Offrejoie responsibility to take the lead in supporting Beirut relief efforts and inspire people in Lebanon and across the world to work for a better Lebanon, where people's dignity comes first. Our foremost objective is not only to reconstruct over 50 buildings and 500 apartments, but to restore over 350 families' dignity in the Karantina and Mar Mikhael neighborhoods, representing the most damaged areas following the blast, alongside with the rehabilitation of Beirut's fire brigade department.

Delivering transparency to our stakeholders

I am particularly proud and grateful of our efforts with the Lebanese Diaspora and local businesses played in securing funds and in-kind donations for our mission to rebuild Beirut. I can't thank our donors enough for entrusting us to make the best use of their money. I also thank our Board of Directors for their support and guidance, and our volunteers, who work hard every day. Your focus and determination ensure our ongoing success.

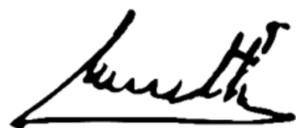

Purpose-driven approach to helping our society

From August 5, 2020 to date, with over a total of 4,500 compassionate volunteers and 250 daily dedicated volunteers, Offrejoie is dedicated to continue investing in the youth of Lebanon. Focusing on the spirit of mutual esteem among each other to grow a sense of solidarity and a new understanding of citizenship, this report reflects our learning culture and showcases our latest achievements that make a positive impact on our society.

Forward thinking has always kept us one step ahead, and we relentlessly aim to deliver on our purpose for our society.

Join our cause. Invest in Lebanon's future. Support our vital and life-saving work.

Together, we can make an impact for a better Lebanon.

How we came to be

Offrejoie was born in 1985, in the midst of a raging war in Lebanon.

A group of young peacemakers, paramedics and friends worked together to promote peace and build bridges between Lebanese communities. They started with children's camps during the conflict, bringing groups of children from differing social classes and backgrounds together to accept each members' differences. Those camps have continued their healing work since 1985, and when those children grew up, they carried the values they had learned and became a movement of young citizens from all the different communities and regions of Lebanon.

Over the years, Offrejoie developed different approaches to tackle the continuing challenges of Lebanon. At its core are the consistent practice of the values of Love, Respect, and Forgiveness and voluntary service.

What began as a group of enthusiastic volunteers in 1985 has developed into a voluntary movement across the country of Lebanon with a footprint in France in 1986 and a sister group in Iraq established in 2012 to share and promote its vision and experience.

Our Values

Love

Offrejoie understands the necessity of a fair and appeased society where human relationships transcend communitarian barriers and where a social solidarity based on the shared values of generosity, trust, forgiveness, honesty and ethic is upheld, where individuals would do unto others only what they want done to them, in a spirit of mutual respect and deep belief in a reconciliation and a better tomorrow for all.

Respect

Offrejoie promotes supporting the most vulnerable, and opposes all forms of ignorance, contempt and isolationism. Through a genuine open mindedness, Offrejoie appreciates the richness of human differences and learns from them.

Forgiveness

Offrejoie recognizes each person's suffering and encourages individuals to recognize the Other's suffering as equal to theirs. Offrejoie analyzes the past objectively, paving the way for forgiveness and mutual trust to be at the core of a society that never compromises on fundamental human rights.

Our Mission

The mission of Offrejoie is to gather the entire family of Lebanon as a treasure for humanity by serving with and for the "Other." Offrejoie believes that fragmented societies can heal through the creation of human relationships born of shared opportunities to serve the community. By serving together a spirit of mutual regard and esteem grows fostering a sense of solidarity and a new understanding of citizenship.

Our Vision

Offrejoie envisions a society whose citizens are united in diversity and committed to honoring the dignity and fundamental human rights of all.

Our Members

Offrejoie's members are overwhelmingly volunteers. They believe in the values of the organization and lead by example, living a life of openness and acceptance. They also are committed to establish a network of solidarity, both nationally and internationally.

Our Funding

Offrejoie relies on two financial sources to resource its mission:

1

Renovation Work

While reconstructing two of the buildings, the focus was on preserving its heritage to consequently deliver an exact version of what it was like prior to the explosion. Special construction materials and techniques are used to deal with the sand/lime nature of its structure.

During these months, several milestones were reached, some of which are:

- A tilted sandstone wall was dismantled and rebuilt piece by piece
- A complete slab was poured
- A new brick roof was installed, and internal and external paint was applied

Volunteer-Based Rehabilitation Efforts

Challenges & Lessons Learned

Lesson 1: Clear roles and responsibilities

Each volunteer should be assigned clear roles and responsibilities in the various interventions that we are leading. We currently have a specialized team of engineer and architect volunteers leading the rehabilitation works. On the other hand, we have also set up a community team which handles everything from food/NFI distributions to psycho-social activities with kids.

Lesson 2: Balancing our interventions

Offrejoie is working hard to assist diverse neighborhoods with significant damage resulting from the blast. Our organization does not differentiate between Lebanese, refugees or migrant workers. We are learning to tailor our response to the specific needs of individuals and communities from various socio-economic or religious background.

Lesson 3: Finding learning opportunities everywhere

Offrejoie always strives to find learning opportunities for its volunteers so that they can thrive and grow into their chosen fields of intervention. Offrejoie also involves the community into the decision-making process by listening to feedback and tailoring our response accordingly.

Volunteer-led, diverse and community-based interventions

Since day one, Offrejoie has adopted a quick and efficient approach, intervening in the most damaged areas of Beirut, while balancing assistance towards the various communities of different socio-economic, religious and cultural backgrounds. Offrejoie has also provided its volunteers with numerous learning opportunities while always taking into consideration the community's perspectives and feedback. Even though challenges arise daily, we continue to learn and grow as our intervention expands.

“Our dedicated team of volunteers has proven time and time again that Lebanon's young generations of skilled men and women can take on any challenge with open minds and hearts”

Evita Mouawad, Former
Emergency Operations
Coordinator

Our Focus for the Future

In the coming months, we are hoping to:

- Complete rehabilitations in Mar Mikhael and Karantina.
- Complete rehabilitation in the Beirut Fire Brigade Department.
- Expand our window repairs' reach in Khandak el Ghamik and Basta and optimize our mobile windows' repair unit team in order to be able to reach new areas.
- Speed up repairs of cultural heritage and religious sites.
- Lay out a detailed and effective plan for the re-urbanization of public spaces, gardens and communal areas.
- Assisting with furniture and household appliances' needs when possible.
- Supporting small businesses to get back on track.

“Being part of Offrejoie emergency team to support Beirut relief efforts was the only way to recover from this tragedy. It was and still is my drive to move forward.”

Carla Jreidini, Communications & Fundraising Team Leader

Addressing the Challenges We Have Faced

Fundraising

Offrejoie continues to raise funds solely from independent donors and corporations in order to maintain its flexibility and neutrality on the ground. Beirut relief fundraisers have gained a lot of media attention in the first 2 months of the blast, however fundraising efforts have significantly slowed down since. Offrejoie continues to share its progress transparently on social media and through our reporting for funding to continue.

Recruiting Volunteers

Thousands of volunteers showed interest in the Beirut response within the first couple of months following the blast. Nevertheless, as schools, universities and workplaces are slowly reopening, the recruitment and availability of volunteers has become more challenging. Our volunteer recruitment and dispatching team continues to work around the clock to recruit new individuals and groups who can contribute to our relief efforts.

Speeding up rehabilitation efforts prior to winter

Offrejoie's rehabilitation teams have been racing against the clock to make sure the more than 350 families we are assisting can return to their homes in safety and dignity prior to the winter season. This has been a huge challenge as construction work requires time and patience. However, together with our volunteers and skilled laborers, we are committed to complete all external repairs prior to the rainy season to make sure our beneficiaries have a safe roof over their heads.
